Harrah College of Hotel Administration.

“When online gambling becomes a routine daily behavior, it is easier for consumers to engage in mindless consumption of that activity, ultimately resulting in addiction and resultant financial losses.

Results show online gamblers gamble more frequently and aggressively.

S.

Cotte and LaTour suggest that the following strategies could also be tied into online regulations, thereby helping reduce the incidences of problem gambling:

- o Having an online gambling counselor available online

- o Making tabulations of wins and losses more central and larger on the screen

The study was funded by a grant from the William F.
