In the US, it's common to see this type of bet referred to as a "total", abbreviated as O-U.

Let's say the Bills - Chiefs total is 54.

Over-under bets can be good for beginners, says Steven Petrella, deputy editor of The Action Network, a sports media company, and in some ways might be better than point spreads or moneylines because they're more intuitive.

They will therefore post what they think is the most likely value for the over-under.

They can use two strategies to do this:

Change the over-under value itself.

The payout on an over-under bet doesn't just depend on predicting the score correctly.

In the 2016-17 season, the average NBA total was just 210.

No.

For each square that is sold, have the person sign their name on whatever box they want.

Then do the same for the left side of the board.

Like the squares, there are usually websites where you can print these out.
