The Walt Disney Company is so big $203.6 Billion huge that whenever they decide to do something it becomes news, and the fact that they seem to be heading towards adding sports betting to their mix is as interesting as it gets when it comes to odd bedfellows. But installing betting kiosks on Magic Mountain is not the plan; according to Disney CEO Bob Chapek, the idea is to add a sports betting element to one of its holdings ESPN and embrace this new multi-billion dollar industry in a way that will please its shareholders.

We're working hard on it, and we hope to have something to announce in the future in terms of a partnership there that will allow us to access that revenue stream and also make sure that our guests are being having their needs met. It makes sense legal sports betting is no small world, after all, but instead a multi-billion dollar US industry that the 'kids' all seem to be enjoying more and more.
