Just like at home, you could find a table using one deck of cards, but it's far more common for between six and eight cards to be in play at a live casino venue.

To most of us, that makes very little difference. We still get two cards, see what the dealer's upcard is, and can then play out our hand in the usual way.

Why Casinos Change How Many Decks Are Used in Blackjack

There are two good reasons why casinos tend to prefer using six to eight decks of cards at a blackjack table.

However, if six to eight decks are in play, you can play many blackjack hands before the dealer must shuffle the decks once more.

One thought behind this is that it makes it much harder for players at the table to keep track of cards that have been seen.

So, not only do you have to keep track of more cards between shuffles, you don't actually know how many tens or picture cards are in play.
