Home teams are listed at the bottom and will therefore be your even-numbered squad.

Favorites are the teams laying points, which is represented by a minus (-) sign.

You can add the spread to your team's final score and have that edge throughout the game.

That number also increases or decreases based on bets coming in on the Over or Under.

The skill in this often requires you to forecast how a game will be wagered since we often see opening lines bet up over the course of the week due to the majority of the money coming in on the favorite.

The same goes for the Total, which projects the combined number of points expected in a contest.

At any given point in the week, from when the line opens until just before kick off, you'll see different numbers representing the current lines.
