Annoyed with family suggesting fake purchases

I just opened my shop a few weeks ago. I haven't gotten a sale yet which is a bummer but also I have a pretty specific demographic(I sell patterned headwrap) Tj T* BT positive review. And to make my MIL do the same. The first few times I graciously declined because she said she wouldn't wear them(In fact she said she would) Tj T* B ind. I personally don't want my first sale to be a sham. Has anyone else dea

It with this? It's driving me nuts. If she really wanted me to get a sale sh e should encourage others to buy from my shop, not just give me pity money.

Edit: apparently I'm in the wrong. I will reevaluate my feelings thanks for the help!

this is how many sellers get their first sales and reviews. As long as they don't live in the same household with you, on the same IP, it's a great way to start the ball rolling. It's pretty common, you are being waaaaaay too se sitive and overreacting.

It is common that people have a family member or friend make a purchase to help things get going.

My family members each bought items through my Etsy store but they each had a sp ecific request of what they wanted and each item was custom for them. But my fir st sale came from a total stranger is Mass.

At the same time, if you want your first sale to be organic, more power to you.

There is nothing wrong with that. It's a cool feeling when you land your fir st sale. We were driving down the street to go on a camping trip when my first s ale came in and I turned the car around and spend an hour making and packing my first sale.

I totally get it! But sometimes friends & family purchasing your items gets the ball rolling but of course if they're going to actually use it. My boyfr riend's mom was my first customer for my soap business, she knew what my prod uct was like because I had her test my product before I even started my shop. No w she always purchases from me because she genuinely loves my products. So nothi ng to feel bad about family buying your items but only if they truly like/will u se your items.
