A fold bet is one single bet, placed on the number of selections you choose, and for the bet to be successful, every single one of the selections must win.

In the example above, this shows the additional cost though, as betting on four folds but across six selections instead of four means that the bet cost 15 x your unit stake.

A four fold bet is a bet that is based on four selections.

If you are placing just one four fold bet then you choose four selections and place one bet on them all to win.

If four win, you have one winning bet, five win you have five winning bets and if they all win you have 15 winning bets.

For example, if you wanted to use eight selections for your five folds, there are a total of 56 different combinations here, so your bet is 56x your unit stake

However, when it comes to returns, these are the types of bet you can place weekly, on football for example, and even if you only win two or three times during

in the hope of winning big.
